Q: Finding the control from a tabPage I have a Windows Form (frmMain) which has a TabControl, in this TabControl i have three tabs. For every tab there is another form. For example, frmSettings contains a tab named "Settings", which has a tab named "Settings". The same holds true for the other tabPage. I create a new form, which I fill with my data. The user can now modify some of this data using these new forms. If there is a time where the user wants to change the data of another control on the current form i'd like to display another form with the same tab. I don't know how I can find the "Control" which should be on the current form. My code so far: public static void InitializeTabControl() { TabControl cTabs = new TabControl(); cTabs.Location = new System.Drawing.Point(0, this.Height); cTabs.Name = "cTabs"; this.Controls.Add(cTabs); for (int i = 0; i
