What's new in Idle Champions - Bardic Inspiration Vol 1:

Today's show is a special one! It has been a long time coming (vaguely inspired by that Charmed reboot) and it's been a while since I have chosen such an obvious top topic. So without further ado... Today we take a look at The Best Pokémon Games. Let's start with the obvious one. Am I right? No? Well then let's carry on shall we? Here are our criteria: I don't limit it to only Game Boy. I don't limit it to only handhelds. Multiple versions or spin-offs don't count as separate games. I'm just here to have some fun. Let me first of all say - this was a hard, hard choice. It's the closest thing I can get to the Nintendo-era, pre-3D handheld console era for the console, so you can be sure I'm not favouring anything made in the modern era. There were big games, like Pokémon Red, Blue or Green if you limit it to 2 and just the 3 games, and then there were the more of the game's brand titles, like Pokémon Stadium, Pokémon Stadium 2, Pokémon Dream World or (of course) the second generation of the games where the evolutions were introduced - Orange version>Yellow version>Blue version>Red version >Green version But I think it's harder to point out two specific games from the older generation. Because I totally picked them! And you can't fault me. My viewing was through a Japanese angle and Pokémon in Japan is the be-all, end-all. I actually had to stop myself from saying that because they are so much more niche than the games in America that are so high on this list. I'm actually extending this list to 3x5ths because that's the years it spans - the original first generation of Pokémon game - the greatest generation-ported generation - then the second generation which, once again, I think was the greatest generation of all time. Pokémon Advance was included but it's just never going to be in a top 10 post at least, the novel is a pretty terrible RPG, and just not as popular as Gameboy in Japan. Honourable mentions go out to Pokémon: Master Quest for the GBA

Are you ready for the adventure of your life?! Listen up, brah! Now you're about to go to this incredible world! With its beautiful and impressive landscape, exotic animals and beautiful humans - why don't you go and take a look? We've placed this special boat in your hands, where you will be able to go to the far-off islands, where you will meet unique characters and solve amusing puzzles. Your task in this game is to solve nonograms - puzzles with consecutive pictures, in which the correct combination of pictures shows something else. The world of nonograms is not restricted to any one set of rules; every game starts with a different picture and different set of rules. The way you solve nonograms depends on how you see your environment, so your success depends on your thinking skills. There are different kinds of nonograms in the game. Some of them are more suitable for a young child's mind, while others are more suitable for an adult. You will be solving easy, medium and hard puzzles. Do you want to improve your puzzle skills? Enjoy solving nonograms!

Q: replace unicode characters with html entities I want to replace all unicode characters in a string with their HTML entity equivalent. For example: `u'\u2122'` will be converted to `'\u2122'` How to achieve this in python (3.5)? A: Use the ascii codec to convert the text to ASCII before. `ascii_str = text.encode('ascii')` The reverse happens when you decode with `text.decode(encoding='ascii')` Without the encoding it comes back to the original unicode string. A: Use codecs: `import codecs codecs.decode(u'\u2122', 'ascii')` `'\u2122'`

Article content After the devastating floods last year that claimed the lives of two Rivers fans, the Argonauts and the Saskatchewan Roughriders, will the CFL resurrect the old die-hard fans apparel colours? "We're certainly in conversation about that and having some great conversations about it," said Roughriders president and CEO Mark Cohon.
